Saint Paul University is pleased to host Marc Maesschalck, professor of philosophy at Catholic University of Leuven and Research Director of the Centre de philosophie du droit. His recent works include Transformations de l’éthique : de la phénoménologie radicale au pragmatisme social (2010) and Éthique et gouvernance : les enjeux actuels d’une philosophie des normes (2009).

The conference stems from his research on contextual pragmatism in relation to governance and political and social thought. His intellectual horizon, one he himself qualifies as « transversal », speaks of the breadth and depth of his body of work as well as his international outreach in academia and society.

The lecture is in French.
The discussion is in both official languages.
A reception to follow.

RSVP: glasmacher@ustpaul.ca.