

Saint Paul University Launches a New 5-Episode French-Only Podcast Series in Partnership with LeDroit

Ottawa, February 4, 2025 — Université Saint-Paul is excited to announce the launch of a new five-episode podcast series, recorded at La Cité collégiale in partnership with LeDroit. This series, presented entirely in French, aims to provide the public with enriching discussions on a variety of current and expert topics specific to Université Saint-Paul.

The podcasts will be released on the first Sunday of each month, with the first episode available starting February 2, 2025. The topics covered include:

1. “Artificial Intelligence: Serving Whom and What?”
An episode reflecting on the impact of artificial intelligence on our future, examining its ethical and social implications, in dialogue with Professor Jonathan Durand Folco.
2. “What is Transformative Leadership?”
In conversation with Professor Bianca Briciu, this episode explores the concept of transformative leadership and its role in creating positive change in various sectors and communities.
3. “Sign Languages: A Social and Political Issue in the Age of Minorities”
This episode, in discussion with Professor Julie Châteauvert, highlights the role of sign languages as minority languages and their importance in promoting inclusivity and social justice.
4. “Why Do We Harm One Another? Reflections on Rape as a War Strategy and Its Impact on Communities”
An intense and necessary episode addressing sexual violence in conflict zones and its long-term effects on the affected communities, presented by Professor Buuma Maisha.
5. “The University of Tomorrow: What Role Ahead?”
The final episode offers a reflection on the future of universities and the essential role they will play in tomorrow's society. This conversation will take place live at Université Saint-Paul, with Rector Louis Patrick Leroux and François Carrier, Executive Director at Le Droit. Everyone is invited to attend.

This podcast series aims to provide listeners with an in-depth understanding of these crucial topics and encourage meaningful conversations about the future of our society.

The episodes will be available for free on Spotify, Balado Québec, and YouTube, exclusively in French. For more information, follow Université Saint-Paul's social media pages for regular updates.

We invite you to listen to these fascinating conversations and join us in exploring these essential issues!
